Why Study in Denmark

Top Rated Universities

The University of Copenhagen is ranked high amongst its fellow schools in Denmark. The University of Southern Denmark also offers competitive study abroad programs for international students. Other popular universities include:

- Aarhus University
- Roskilde University
- Aalborg University
- The Royal Danish Academy of Fine Arts.

Scholarships / Grants

Many universities will offer scholarships, grants, and/or financial aid to help fund your education

Unique Social Life / Traditions

Students in Denmark are involved in more social interactions surrounding their studies.

Why Study in Denmark

Housing / Living Costs

Living costs will add up to around 700 - 900 EUR monthly in smaller towns. In larger areas, like Copenhagen, living costs could reach up to 1200 EUR a month.

Happiest Country in the World

Denmark was voted the happiest country in the world in April 2016, via the World Happiness Report.

Exotic Food Culture

Another reason to study abroad in Denmark is to experience the country's unique food culture. American and Italian influences can be seen in Denmark with pastas, barbecues, and salad bars. As a student, getting to experience these traditional dishes with locals is part of the immersion process.

Why Study in Denmark

Wildlife / National Parks

Elk, boars, wolves, and brown bears frequent the terrains of Denmark. The University of Copenhagen offers an incredible Animal Science program, which is taught in English. Many universities, like Copenhagen, offer work permits for international students. If you're studying zoology or an animal related career, the National Park Service may be hiring student help. It would be a great opportunity to work with such unique wildlife.

Diverse Geography / Outdoor Activities

The outdoor activities which can be found here are unique and fascinating to international students. Caving is a popular activity in Jutland, where three abandoned mines are now open to the public.

Why Study in Denmark

Events / Festivals

The Aalborg Carnival is the largest carnival in Northern Europe, with over 60,000 participants and over 100,000 onlookers. Within the carnival is the Grand Parade, which ends in a large-scale party of colors in the city.

Popular Landmarks

Denmark is a gold mine for students wishing to study history, anthropology, geography, the social sciences, and many more. For those seeking contemporary thrills, The Tivoli Gardens is also situated in Copenhagen.
